NURSE TO GERMANY

“WE SUPPORT HOW YOU SUPPORT”

WHY DID GERMANY ?

Germany has noticed a growing need for qualified nurses as the global demand for healthcare workers continues to rise. Germany will need 3,000,000 nurses by 2030 to make up for the shortage in the labor market.

Several factors, such as an aging population and improvements in medical technology, are responsible for this demand. Similar to other industrialized nations, Germany is witnessing a change in its population towards an older age group.

The need for nurses is growing as a result of the aging population's greater need for specialized care and healthcare services.

PATHWAYS FOR FOREIGN NURSES IN GERMANY

A knowledge examination known as an anpassungslehrgang or kenntnisprüfung, is a mandatory requirement in Germany for foreign nursing professionals who want to practice their profession there.

A course called Anpassungslehrgang bridges knowledge or skill gaps between the foreign nurse's education and the German system by offering both theoretical and practical training. It facilitates their acquainting themselves with the German legal system, medical terminology, and healthcare practices.

The Kenntnisprüfung is a test in Germany to assess a candidate's nursing knowledge and abilities to ensure that they fulfill the standards and requirements set by the German healthcare system. The German nursing licensure process, known as The Kenntnisprüfung, requires passing both theoretical and practical parts in order for a candidate to be recognized as a nurse.
